Rapson Revisited Tour

Docomomo Symposium
June 4, 2015

Ralph Rapson, FAIA (1914-2008), was an architect and educator. He served as head of the School of Architecture at the University of Minnesota for thirty years and also led an influential architectural practice. This tour will consider Rapson's work on three scales: grand urban vision; university campus building; and private residence.

Riverside Plaza Minneapolis 1973

Designed as Cedar-Riverside New Town-in-Town in 1973. Cedar Square West (now Riverside Plaza) was the only portion of the five-part, diversified, mixed-use, urban project that was built.

Rarig Center West Bank Campus University of Minnesota Minneapolis 1972

Originally known as the Rarig Center for Performing Arts and Radio-Television Facility, the complex building was designed to house four theaters (thrust stage, proscenium, theater-in-the-round, and black box) and the University's radio and television department.

University Grove Falcon Heights 1928 - 1970s

Between 1956 and 1968, Rapson designed eight houses for the University of Minnesota-owned University Grove neighborhood including the William G. Shepherd House (1956) and the Paul and Veryl Cashman House (1962).
